

A Romance of the Fur Country.

LENGTH, 795 FEET.

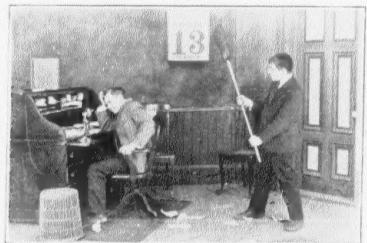

COPYRIGHT 1908

DO IT NOW!

LENGTH, 170 FEET

Mr. Grouch is dissatisfied with his help. Everything goes too slow, so he has a sign painted: "DO IT NOW" and hangs it up in his office. He then rings for the foreman of the factory. This man has long had an ill feeling toward Mr. Grouch and when after receiving a good lecture on "how to work" he discovers the sign "DO IT NOW", he now does what he has delayed a long time: knocks Mr. Grouch off his chair. The next to come is the stenographer. She loves Mr. Grouch secretly. Seeing the sign "DO IT NOW", she puts her arms around his neck and hugs and kisses him. In his despair, Mr. Grouch takes up the waste paper basket and scatters the contents all over the floor. He then rings for the office boy and scatters him to clean the floor.

The office boy, ready to kill the man who invented work, notices the sign "DO IT NOW". Blaming Mr. Grouch for the work, he knocks him off the chair with his broom. This is too much for Mr. Grouch. He takes the sign off the wall, tears it in pieces and is satisfied at least for a while with the work as it is now done.

S. Lubin,
TRADE MARK REG.
COPYRIGHTED

Life Motion Picture Machines, Films,
Slides and Stereopticons.